THE ATLANTIC & PACIFIC

The Boston Advertiser, speaking of the above road, says the company was never in so good a condition as now, financially, and in regard to its progress. All the heavy mountain work has been done and nearly all the grading is completed, the few short gaps of grading remaining being under contract to be finished Feb. 1st, 1883. The laying of steel rails is progressing rapidly and will be finished by April 15th to the Needles, on the bank of the Colorado, where the Southern Pacific is to meet it with a branch from Mohave. Some of the work among the mountains of the Continental divide and the Arizona divide has been very heavy and costly, one mile of road in Johnson Cañon costing $111,000. This mile includes a short tunnel and an iron viaduct across the cañon 265 feet high. There is not a wooden bridge on the road; all are of iron or stone, and one cost over $250,000; not a yard of iron rail is on the main line, but all fifty-six pound steel rails. The road has plenty of money. President Nutt says, to complete its lines and pay interest for a year. It can show, he declares, the best built new railway in the country. Thus far this month the company has paid on its construction account over $480,000. It has hitherto been in the habit of paying all the "completed estimates" of its engineers on the 10th of the month following, and many of its contractors who have completed their jobs and are being pressed for payment by the sub-contractors, whose men in turn are pressing them for their money so that they can go home, have been a little anxious to get their pay with even more than the usual promptness, but there has been no trouble, except in the case of Latta, and that, as has been said, was not a question of payment but of the price of ties. President Nutt has in his office a collection of views of scenery along the line, prominent points in the work, camps of the construction corps, etc., taken by one of the clerks in the engineering department, who seems to be an excellent photographer. These views are very interesting, as showing the difficult nature of many of the obstacles surmounted by this line.

THE SIZE OF ARIZONA COUNTIES.

The Citizen has compiled a most interesting table of the sizes of counties in the Territory from the Surveyor-General's records. Some of the counties embrace a greater area than some of the eastern states and as much wealth, though undeveloped. The table shows the following distances:

Yavapai, N to S, about 200 miles; E to W, 145.
Mohave, N to S, about 190 miles; E to W, in northern part, 40 miles; E to W in central and southern part, 60 or 70.
Yuma, N to S about 140 miles; E to W, 70.
Apache, N to S, about 325 miles; E to W, 95.
Maricopa, N to S, west part about 100 miles; N to S, east part 35 to 50 miles; E to W north part, 100; E to W south part, 65.
Pinal, N to S, about 70 miles; E to W, 100.
Gila, N to S, largest distance, about 65 miles; E to W north part, 70.
Graham, N to S, about 80 miles; E to W, 80.
Pima, east part N to S, about 80 miles; west part N to S, 30 to 60; east to west, 170.
Cochise, N to S, about 75 miles; E to W, 80.

"Which am de properest way to suppress oneself; does yer say: 'We eated at de table,' or 'We has done ate at de table?'" asked one darkey of another, they being engaged in a grammatical discussion. As they could not agree, the question was referred to Uncle Mose for his decision which was: "In de case ob you two niggahs, none of you am right." "What am de proper way to say 'We eated at de table,' Uncle Mose?" "De properest way for sich cattle as you two am to say: 'We fed at de troft.'"—Texas Siftings.

BRICKS FROM SLAG.—The utilization of slag waste is fast assuming considerable economical importance. The manufacture of brick from granulated blast furnace slag will soon be begun in Germany. The slag is run into water, and the grit thus obtained is mixed up with lime, concrete or plaster of Paris, and formed into bricks, which are dried for a month. They possess greater solidity than common brick, and seem to resist a much greater pressure.

MADE INSANE BY NOXIOUS GASES.—At the Albion works, Eureka, McDonald, a smelter who had been in one of the tunnel for repairs, was overpowered and rendered unconscious by noxious gasses, when resuscitated McDonald was for a time violently insane. He seized a sledge hammer and charged upon his friends. Being overpowered and put to bed he came out all right in a few hours.
